Jeb Bush,
Republican

Denisha Merriweather, Jacksonville, FL:

My mom, my brother, and my uncle all dropped out of school. And by the time I was in the 3rd grade, I had failed three times.

Miguel Manrara, Miramar, FL:

My first job was picking up garbage and cardboard. So I could have some money to help my family. My mother and my father.

Bertha De La Rosa, Cooper City, FL:

Lucy has autism. She doesn't speak. She doesn't walk. But not being able to speak is not the same as not having anything to say. People with disabilities they want to have freedom, just like everybody else.

Kim Donatelle, Sarasota, FL:

One out of four women are going to be victimized by somebody who claims to love them. Domestic violence is an epidemic. This isn't a small problem.

Jeb Bush, Republican:

The barriers right now on people rising up is the great challenge of our time. So many people could do so much better if we fixed a few things.

My core beliefs start with the premise that the most vulnerable in our society. Should be in the front of the line. Not in the back. And as governor I had a chance to act on that core belief.

Denisha:

Governor Jeb Bush instituted the first voucher program in the United States. To give low income kids an opportunity to go to a private school. Out of my immediate family I'm the first person to graduate from high school. And then, I went on to graduate from college.

Miguel:

I'm currently an Account Manager. And the main reason I am in the situation and the position that I am in right now. Is because Jeb Bush allowed companies, like (indiscernible) of Florida. To grow and to create high paying jobs. I'm the perfect presentation of the American dream.

Jeb Bush:

This is what leadership is about. It's not just about yapping about things. It's a lot of people talking and they're pretty good at it. But when you start fixing things. I said I was going to do these things and I did them. And the result was Florida is a lot better off.

Kim:

I think Governor Bush changed a lot of lives in Florida. I'm very grateful that he was our governor. I don't think that we would be where we are today; with regards to domestic violence, had he not been the governor. He wanted women to not live the way that I found myself. It's changed so many lives.

Bertha:

He really cares about us. He really cares about people with developmental disabilities. And with all disabilities.

There are people today that are getting services because of what Jeb did. He doesn't do it for himself. He does it because he is a true servant. He is the best voice that we have.

Jeb:

I'm proud of the fact that many families now have the chance to live lives with a purpose and meaning.

You can improve the life of people. Whether it's in the programs for the developmental disabled. Or change our economy. Or fixing higher education. All of these things can be fixed. I'm absolutely convinced of it.

What we need is new leadership that takes conservative principles and applies them so people can rise up.

America's best days are in front of us. And we are going to lead the world.
